

JKL's CONFLICT MINERALS POSITION

The Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, was signed by President Obama on July 21, 2010, and addresses requirements for manufacturers of products containing tin, tantalum, gold, tungsten or any other “conflict metal”.

Section 1502 of this law imposes direct SEC reporting requirements on any publicly traded company whose product contain metals derived from conflict minerals. Conflict minerals are mined in or near the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) and have been determined by the U.S. Government to be financing conflict in the DRC and its neighboring countries.

JKL Components Position:

Although JKL Components is not publicly traded, JKL fully supports efforts associated with the total eradication of illegal mining operations. JKL Components Corporation does survey the supply chain associated with these materials and while a portion of our products do contain tin, tungsten and gold, it is our policy to not knowingly purchase any raw materials that contain conflict minerals.

JKL is committed to working with its suppliers to proactively promote responsible sourcing that includes use of conflict-free materials and products that are not associated with human rights violations or ethical misconduct.

JKL's commitment includes:

- Communicating our expectations to our suppliers
- Requiring relevant suppliers to use the reporting template and declare smelters.
- Implementing corrective actions if conflict metals are identified within the supply chain.
